

Dear Librarian/Library Acquisitions Committee:

I recommend that the library set up an institutional free trial to Electronic Enlightenment in order to assess its suitability for research, and for teaching _____ . (List course title.)

Electronic Enlightenment

A scholarly research project of the Bodleian Libraries, University of Oxford, EE offers unrivalled access to the web of correspondence between the greatest thinkers and writers of the long 18th century. EE brings the past to life through its web of correspondence, based on critical editions of primary sources. EE lets the user eavesdrop on politicians and poets, physicians and philosophers, engineers and explorers, bankers and booksellers, clockmakers and colonists, scientists and musicians, and features nearly 59,000 letters from over 7,100 writers, including Joseph Addison, Jeremy Bentham, James Boswell, Daniel Defoe, Thomas Hobbes, David Hume, John Locke, Alexander Pope, J. J. Rousseau, Adam Smith, Jonathan Swift, Laurence Sterne and Voltaire.

Features & Benefits

- Cross-searchable access to over 58,000 letters from definitive critical editions published by leading scholarly and university presses, including many that are no longer available in print.
- More than 258,000 editorial notes, some of which are not available elsewhere, that firmly anchors the documents in their historical context.
- Original language editions – includes letters in English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Swedish and Russian, as well as Latin and Greek, with increasing numbers of translations supplied.
- Regularly updated with further critical editions, including previously unpublished correspondence – larger functionality upgrades and major content loads occur twice a year.
- Teaching support including lesson plans and talking points to help engage and direct students through the resource.
- Publishing support through the EE digital publishing platform — will help you edit and publish, in historical context, letters from your own archival sources.
